Roberto Giordanelli Biography
The author was born in Kensington, London to Italian parents and spent his childhood bouncing back and forth between the two countries. He qualified as a mechanical engineer, but turned down a "job for life" at British Airways to pursue his passion for cars.

A prolific magazine writer and test driver for several magazines including Chief Test Driver for Auto Italia magazine, put him into the worlds' most amazing road and race cars, including six F1 cars. He started driving cars at 14 years of age. His first motor race was in 1966 aged 18 in a self-prepared car, where he very nearly won.

He spent a lifetime in motor racing, as an engineer, test driver, race instructor and race driver in a myriad of cars with countless visits to the podium. Along the way he became an

ARDS race instructor and also studied to become a Motorsport UK/Ofqual qualified sports coach for motorsport. He is currently racing an FIA Pre-63 Jaguar E-Type with great success.
